FILM MAKING

Nua Media's core services are:

factual film making for broadcasters and corporate clients, developing digital media products and delivering media training – we have designed a factual film making course, accredited by the University of Ulster.

Factual Films

2 x 30' training and information films for Irish Hospice Foundation, Dublin. These films 'Breaking Bad News' and 'Stories from the End of Life: Dying with Dignity' are designed to inform and educate medical staff and others about issues surrounding dying in Ireland today.

1 x 30' documentary 'Danny from Bandon' for TG4. An investigation into an Orange marching tune and links with Co. Cork, narrated by musician Nollaig Casey.

Other broadcasting and corporate clients include RTE 'Nationwide', Dundalk Institute of Technology.

Digital Media

Nua Media has been to the forefront of developing a web based e-learning language resource and recently Una Murphy has been engaged by the BBC to produce and direct short films about artists for BBC Jam – a new web based learning tool for children.

Media Training

Film Skills Ireland www.filmskill-sireland.com, is a location filming course for international student documentary filmmakers, accredited by the University of Ulster.

We also delivered media skills training to corporate clients including the Londonderry Port Authority, Irish Congress of Trade Unions, Belfast as well as youth and community organisations. Our courses can be viewed at www.learningpoint.ie (select training providers from the menu).

PASSION STATEMENT

We enjoy location film directing and have an excellent track record working as television producers and journalists for BBC, RTE and UTV on news & current affairs and factual programmes. We have worked throughout Ireland and Britain, Germany and the Middle East.
